6. To develop an appreciation for museums as important centres of education and historical preservation.
7. To connect classroom learning with direct exposure to historical and cultural resources.

Visit Details:

The visit began with an introduction to the historical and academic significance of Deccan College Post-Graduate and Research Institute. The students were then taken to the Maratha Museum, where they were introduced to various aspects of Maratha history and heritage.

The students observed the museum collections and gained an opportunity to understand the historical period through material and visual sources. The exhibits helped them develop a better understanding of the social, political, cultural, and administrative aspects of the Maratha period.

The visit provided students with practical exposure to historical sources and demonstrated how museums contribute to the preservation and interpretation of the past. The students were encouraged to observe the exhibits carefully and understand the importance of artefacts as sources of historical knowledge.

The museum visit also helped students appreciate the rich cultural heritage of Maharashtra and the importance of protecting and preserving historical objects for future generations. It encouraged them to look beyond textbook-based learning and develop a deeper interest in history and heritage studies.

The educational visit proved to be an informative and enriching experience for the students. It enhanced their understanding of Maratha history and culture and created greater awareness about the significance of museums in preserving the collective heritage of society. The visit concluded with an expression of gratitude to the authorities and staff of Deccan College for providing the students with this valuable learning experience.
